THE COTTAGE DOOR.

How sweet the rest that labor yields
The humble and the poor,
Where sits the patriarch of the fields
Before his cottage door;
The lark is singing in the sky,
The swallows on the eaves,
And love is beaming in each eye
Beneath the summer leaves.

The air amid his fragrant bowers
Supplies unpurchased health,
And hearts are bounding 'mid the flowers,
More dear to him than wealth.
Peace, like the sunlight, plays
Around his humble cot,
And happy nights and cheerful days
Divide his lowly lot.

And when the village Sabbath bell
Rings out upon the gale,
The father bows his head to tell
The music of its tale—
A fresher verdure seems to fill
The fair and dewy sod,
And every infant tongue is still
To hear the word of God.

O, happy hearts! to Him who stills
The ravens when they cry,
And makes the lilly 'neath the hills
So glorious to the eye—
The trusting patriarch prays to bless
His labors with increase;
Such ways are "ways of pleasantness,"
And all such "paths are peace."

BECKY HARLAND'S PLACE.

BY AMY RANDOLPH.

"I don't know whether you will suit me or not," said Miss Towers, reflectively.

"I will do my best, ma'am," said little Becky.

"Any objections to the country?" demanded Miss Towers, in a brusque, business-like way.

"No, ma'am."

"I never have kept a girl before," said Miss Towers, gravely, "but my brother is coming home this summer, and I don't want to be obliged to be in the kitchen the whole time. Where have you lived last?"

Becky Harland grew pink all over.

"I have never lived out before, ma'am, but my uncle died suddenly, and there was no more than enough left to support my aunt, so I'm going to try to support myself."

"Very right and proper," said Miss Towers. "Well, Rebecca, I will try you at all events. Six dollars a month is very moderate wages, and although you don't look real stout, yet I think I can make you very useful about the house."

So Miss Towers took Becky Harland back with her to the old stone farm house in the Housatonic valley. And Becky was never tired of helping Miss Towers strain the milk, and work over the butter, and gather pink honeysuckles, and feed the little downy turkeys. And the roses in her cheeks grew deeper and the velvet bloom of her lips seemed to catch the scarlet of the wood strawberries, and Miss Towers declared, with an admiring glance at her little "help," that "she didn't took like the same child she was before, that she didn't."

Meanwhile the preparations for Miss Towers' "brother" went briskly on.

"I'll make up a lot of cocoanut pound cake," Miss Towers said, with the recipe book in her hand. "That's what he used to be desprit fond of when he was a boy."

"Perhaps his tastes may have changed," said Becky, who was rubbing the old mahogany furniture with a waxed cloth, at the other end of the room.

"I don't know about that," said Miss Towers, with a troubled air. "I haven't seen him since!"

"Not seen him since he was a boy!" echoed Becky, with open blue eyes.

"Well, it does sound strange, don't it?" said Miss Towers; but you see he went away from home when he was fifteen, and he's been out in the world ever since?"

"Is he a very old gentleman, Miss Towers?" innocently questioned Rebecca, as she rubbed away at the claw foot of the antique pier table.

"Old!" echoed Miss Towers, uplifting both hands in amazement. "Why, he's ever so much younger than I am."

"Is he?" asked Becky. "Why, I've been fancying him, all along, an old gentleman in a wig and cane."

Miss Towers burst into a fit of hearty laughter.

"Well, if that don't beat all?" she cried, wiping the tears from under her spectacle glasses. "But after all, to a stranger that don't know the family story, it might very easily appear so. You see, child, my mother was a widow when she married for the second time, and—dear heart alive, what does ail that little turkey chick, queaking like a possessed creature? Run, Rebecca, and see. I'm afraid the old speckled hen has broken her string, and is worrying it."

Rebecca was sitting in the twilight on the door stone that evening, one cheek resting on her hand, and her eyes dreamily fixed on the far off wall of woods, growing purple in the coming dusk. Miss Towers had gone to carry a basket of her ripest Wilson strawberries to a sick neighbor, and Becky was all alone, thinking over her past, and pondering vaguely on her future.

"How strange it seems that I should be here," she thought, "when it is scarcely a year since I was the gayest little butterfly in every city ball room! The echoes of those old waltzes and gallops come back to me sometimes, when I am just falling asleep with the moonlight on my face, and the maple leaves rustling softly at my open casement; and yet I am far happier here. That is, I should be, if I could only forget one thing. I wonder what girls want to be so fitful and capricious for? Oh, dear," and Becky's blue eyes swam with tears as she remembered the handsome lover who had been so true and faithful and constant, until her own coquetry had driven him away from her side. "I would like so to know what Colonel Falconer is doing now, and whether he is married yet, and if he ever thinks of me. I would write to him if I were the petted heiress still; but as little Becky, who does housework for her daily bread—ah, never, never!"

And Becky, anxious to escape from her own haunting thoughts, jumped up and ran across the dewy meadow to meet Miss Towers, whose tall, angular figure was just coming in sight round the curve of the maple swamp.

"Bless and save the child!" cried Miss Towers. "Why, Rebecca, you ain't afraid?"

"No—yes—I don't know. Let me carry your basket, please."

"Rebecca," cried the old lady, next morning, as she drove the shaggy little pony into the door yard, returning from the village post-office, "I've got a letter. He's coming to-night."

"Is he?" said the girl, smiling because Miss Towers' face was so radiant. "Then I'd better run out in the garden and gather a fresh lot of strawberries before the sun gets any higher."

"Yes, run along: and remember, Rebecca, all that I've told you about sitting quiet and never disturb him when he wants to write, and speaking very low, and keeping out of his way, except when you are wanted, for he has just come from England where they are very particular about servants."

"Yes, ma'am, I will remember," she made answer, meekly, and folded up Miss Towers' black large shawl, while that lady hurried out into the kitchen to see whether the fire was in proper condition for the baking of diver and sundry savory compounds designed to tempt the appetite of the expected guest.

"I wish he wasn't coming!" thought our Becky. "We have been so happy together all the summer, and now—"

"But Miss Towers' voice shrilly calling to Becky to come and stone raisins for her, interrupted the discontented fragment of a reverie into which she had fallen.

Miss Towers was arrayed like unto lillies of the field in her new steel-colored silk dress—our simile applies to the general gorgeousness of the apparel, not its color merely—and white satin ribbons in her cap, when the stage rumbled into sight round the corner of the fence, where a huge willow waved its green banner, shutting off all outside view beyond its streaming boughs.

Little Becky Harland, who had been on the qui vive at the garret window, came flying down stairs like a thistledown blown by the summer breeze.

"Oh, Miss Towers! Miss Towers! there is a gentleman all alone on the back seat of the stage, and I am sure it must be Mr. Towers!"

"Mr. Towers!" repeated the old lady, with an accent almost of irritation. "Why Rebecca, I'm sure I've told you that his name isn't Towers; it is—"

But here she broke short off, hurrying to the front door to greet the new comer, while Becky, in an accountable fit of shyness, shrank back into the corner and looked up into the picture of Ruth and Naomi that hung over the mantlepiece.

"I wish he hadn't come! I wish he hadn't come!" repeated Becky over and over to herself. "We were so happy before!"

And then remembering Miss Towers' judicious advice as to keeping out of the way except when she was wanted, Becky turned to escape out among her friends, the downy chickens, at the south door; but to her infinite discomfiture, just as she opened the door, Miss Towers' steel colored silk rustled up to the threshold, with a tall, stately figure by her side, and poor little Becky came face to face with them, her cheeks dyed scarlet, and her red-brown hair dishevelled by her haste, yet looking wonderful pretty withal.

"Rebecca!" slowly enunciated Miss Towers, in an accent betokening a sort of mild displeasure.

But her tall companion, a man of about thirty-five, with dark grey eyes, hair black as raven's wing, and a face which, if not handsome, bore the exquisite outlines of refinement, had hastily passed her, and entered the room.

"Becky! my darling Becky!"

"Colonel Falconer!" was all the girl could gasp, so totally bewildered was she. "Bless my soul!" ejaculated Miss Towers, rubbing her spectacles as if she would wear a hole in the crystal lenses; "how ever did Rebecca get acquainted with my brother?"

"I was engaged to be married to him once, Miss Towers," said Becky, coloring and smiling, for there was something in Colonel Falconer's eyes that told her all the past was in a fair way to be forgiven.

"And she will be again, Eunice, unless I have lost all my old arts of persuasion," demurely added Col. Falconer.

"But," cried Miss Towers, why did not you tell me, Rebecca?"

"Because, Miss Towers," answered Becky, "I never dreamed for an instant that your brother's name was anything but Towers, or that Colonel Falconer could by any possibility be related to you!"

"Well," cried Miss Towers, "if this don't beat all that I ever heard of—that Maurice Falconer—should—dear me there goes the kettle boiling over in the back kitchen!"

And away went Miss Towers, every housewifely instinct in her bosom roused by the sibilant sounds of the escaping clouds of vapor.

When she came back—it is but just to state that she stopped to take the two pans of buttermilk biscuit out of the oven, and to reach down sundry tumblers of amber jelly from the top shelf of the cupboard—Col. Falconer and Becky Harland were snug and confidential on the front porch. Becky blushed a little when Miss Towers came out, but she did not withdraw her hand from Maurice Falconer's.

"Well," said the lady, after a single keen glance through the gold spectacles, "I s'pose I shall lose my hired help."

"Yes; but then, sister Eunice," said the Colonel, "I shall gain such a sweet little wife."

"Is it really so?" said Miss Towers.

"Yes, it is really so," laughed Becky. But oh, Miss Towers, I shall never in all my life forget how kind you have been to me."

And she stole up to Miss Towers and kissed her withered cheeks so fondly that the old lady had to wink hard to keep back the tears.

"Well, well, go along!" quoth the old lady, "I don't know that I blame you Rebecca, or Maurice either.—Young folks will be young folks."

And she very sensibly went back to finish getting tea.

An Example for Boys.

A notice of a death in last week's Mercury brings again to mind a circumstance that happened over twenty years ago. I was on an electioneering excursion in Jo Davies county, Ill., night overtaking me and being afraid of getting into a mineral hole, I stopped at the first place offering, which proved to be the log house of a charcoal burner. The good wife busied herself in getting my supper whilst I took care of my horse. In the morning after breakfast (the man having gone to the coal pit) I asked for my bill, but the landlady refused to receive anything; she sent her boy to the shed with me to get my horse, and I concluded, as she would take no pay, to give the boy the dollar. The boy was less than half grown, and wore a pair of tow pants, notched about two inches deep by wear around the bottom, a shirt of the same material sewed to his pants, barefoot, a hat through the crown of which his hair protruded, and everything, including face, hands and feet, the color a charcoal burner's son would be, if not freshly washed. The following day this lad, without any change of dress, and carrying an earthen jug, minus a handle, by a string tied around its neck came into my office, the dollar in hand, saying he wished me to buy him something with it, as if it was known he had it would be taken from him to fill the jug next time.

I looked at him, thinking he would want a hat or shoes, and asked him what I should get with it. He answered that he wanted a slate, pencil and an arithmetic, but did not know whether his money would buy all. I went out, got what he wished, and rolling up some paper and pens with them gave them to him.

Many times after I noticed him come into my office when a trial was progressing, slip his jug under the seat, cross his legs in front to keep it out of sight, and listen for hours to the lawyers. I lost sight of him for a season, until my son coming home from Mount Morris Seminary, informed me he was there going to school.—When next I heard from him was after I came to California; he was a partner of a lawyer I knew in Galena. The next I noticed was in an Illinois paper that he was a Douglass Elector; then after that he had gone South in the army.

I afterwards saw a dispatch from him that we had taken Vicksburg, signed by him as Adjutant General, he being then on Grant's staff. I now see by your last week's paper that the Secretary of War is dead. And this Secretary of War was the boy with the tow cloth breeches. Who could fail to love a country whose workings will allow the most obscure to attain the highest positions? So young too! What might he not have reached, had his life been prolonged to a ripe old age? One object in noting this, was for the encouragement of the young. Boys, if this boy with opportunities certainly less than most of you, could accomplish so much, why not you? T.

THE CLOSE OF THE WEEK.—A week. It is but a short time indeed, but its events are a host. To whom has the week just closed brought joy? to whom sorrow? to whom riches? to whom poverty? to whom friends? to whom health? to whom happiness?

What, all these changes in one week? Yes, and a host more numerous than the sands of the sea. Many who see the dawn of the present week will be in another world ere it closes; many whom fortune smiled upon a week ago, are groaning beneath the withering frowns of poverty; many who were floating gently on the bark of life o'er the unruffled sea of happiness a week ago are now wrecks of ruin on the shores of affliction; many upon whom the sun of last Sabbath shone propitiously, have ere this met with ill fortune and been turned upon the world children of poverty, and many whose hopes and expectations were beaming forth bright and prosperous, are at its close the miserable beings of cruel disappointment.

And such is the life of man! It is subject to changes in a week, a day; nay, even an hour. The world is still in commotion — revolution succeeding revolution—time spreading its progress, leaving behind traces of destruction; and even in a small community many thrilling and exciting circumstances might be summed up and recorded at the close of each week.

Josh Billings' Essay on Hornets.

The hornet is an inflammible indoo vidual, sudden in hiz impressiuns and hasty in hiz conclusion, or end.

His natooral disposishun is a warm cross between red pepper in the pod and fusil oil, and his moral bias is, "git out of my way."

They have a long, black body, divided in the middle by a waist spot, but their physical importance lays at the terminus ov their suburb, in the shape of a javelin.

This javelin is always loaded, and stands reddy to unload at a minnit's warning, and enters a man as still as thought, as spry as litening, and as full of melankolly as the toothache.

Hornets never argue a case; they settle all of their differences of opinion by letting their javelin fly, and are as certain to hit as a mule is.

This testy critter lives in congregashuns numbering about one hundred souls, but whether they are male or female, or conservative, or matched in bonds of wedlock, or whether they are Mormons, and a good many of them cling together and keep one husband to save expense, I don't know or don't care. I never have examined their habits much, I never thot it healthy.

Hornets bild their nests, wherever they take a notion to, and seldom are disturbed, for what would it profit a man tew kill 99 hornets and have the one hundredth one hit him with his javelin?

They bild their nests of paper, without any windows to them or any back doors. They have but one place of admission, and the nest is the shape of an overgrown pineapple, and is cut up into just as many bedrooms as there is hornets.

It is very simple to make a hornet's nest if yu can, but I will wager enny man 300 dollars he cant bild one that he could sell to a hornet for haf price.

Hornets are as busy as their second cuzzins, the bees, but what they are about the Lord only knows; they dont lay up any honey, nor any money; they seem to be busy only jist for the sake of working all the time; they are always in as much of a hurry as tho they was going for a doctor.

I suppose this uneasy world would grind around on its axle-tree onst in 24 hours, even if tharo wasn't any hornets, but hornets must be good for sumthing, but I can't think now what it is.

There haint been a bug made yet in vain, nor one that wasn't a good job. There is lots of human men loafing around blacksmith shops and cider mills, all over the country, that don't seem to be necessary for anything but to beg plug tobacco and swear, and steal water melons, but yu let the cholera break out once, and then yu will see the wisdom of having jist sich men laying around; they help count.

Next to the cockroach, who stands to the head, the hornet has got the most waste stummuk, in reference to the rest of his body, thon any of the insek populashun, and here is another mistery; what on airth duz a hornet want so mutch reserved corps for?

I hev jist thought—tew carry his javelin in, thus yu see, the more we discover about things the more we are apt to know.

It is always a good purchase tew pay out our last surviving dollar for wisdum, and wisdum is like the misterious hen's egg; it ain't laid in yure hand, but is laid away under the barn and yu have got to search for it.

The hornet is an unsoshall cuss, he is more haughty than he is proud, he is a thorough-bred bug, but his breeding and refinement has made him like sum other folks I know of, dissatisfied with himself, and everybody else; too much good breeding acts this way sometimes.

Hornets are long lived—I kant just state how long their lives are, but I know from instinkt and observation, that enny critter, be he bug or be he devil, who is mad all the time, and stings every good chance he can git, generally outlives all his naburs.

The only good way tew git at the exact fighting weight of the hornet, is to tutch him, let him hit you once with his javelin, and yu will be willing to testify in court that sumbody run a one-tined pitchfork into yer; and az for the grit i will state for the information ov those who haven't had a chance tew lay in their vermin wisdum az freely az i hav, that one single hornet, who feels well, will brake up a large camp meeting.

What the hornets do for amuzement is another question i kant answer, but sum ov the best read and heaviest thinkers amung the naturalists say they hav target excursions, and heave their javelins at a mark, but i don't imbibe this assershun raw, for i never knue ennybody, so bitter at heart, az the hornets, to waste a blow.

Tharo is one thing that a hornet duz that i will giv him credit for on mi books—he alwuz attends tew his own bizziness, and wont allow any boddy else tew attend tew it, and what he duz iz alwuz a good job, you never see them altering ennything, if they make enny mistake, it iz after dark, and aint seen.

If the hornets made haff az menny blunders az the men do, even with their javelins, everyboddy would laff

Hornets are clear in another way, they have found out, by trying it, that all they kan git in this world, and brag on, is their vittles and clothes, and you never see one, standing at the corner ov a street, with a twenty six inch face on, bekause sum bank had run oph, and took their money with him.

In ending oph this essa, I will cum tew a stop, by concluding, that if hornets was a little more pensive, and not so darned peremptory with their javelins, they might be guilty of less wisdum, but more charity.

The Globe.

HUNTINGDON, PA.

Wednesday morning, Nov. 3, 1869

WM. LEWIS, HUGH LINDSAY, } EDITORS.

The "Globe" has the largest number of readers of any other paper published in the county. Advertisers should remember this.

☞ The guerrilla organ, for several weeks printed at Chicago and Mount Union, has been moved to this place two doors east of us. It will make an effort to live to help to elect a few more Democrats to office.

☞ Gen. J. Bowman Sweitzer has been appointed to the office of Supervisor of Internal Revenue for Western Pennsylvania, in the place of Mr. Southwick, resigned. He was a Democrat, but became an earnest supporter of Gen. Grant.

Who are the Guerrillas in West?—H. D. Who? Why the men who opposed the regularly nominated candidates of their party, of course. Henry has been working so faithfully up to that "programme" of the Doctor for so long that he is at a loss to know what makes a man a guerrilla.

☞ "There is no denying the fact that the contest of the local ticket centered on the vote for Treasurer.—Guerrilla Organ.

And why did it center there? Was it the money that goes into the hands of the Treasurer that the guerrillas were after—or was it because Williamson was not on the Orlady "programme"?

☞ Dr. H. Orlady says he did it, clean this time. He selected the chosen few and sacrificed those not of his choice. Several of the Doctor's friends worked faithfully up to his "programme" after he succeeded in getting the wool pulled over their eyes. They must feel comfortable with the Doctor as their leader.

SHAME.—The last move of the gold gamblers of New York is to create the impression that President Grant was a party to their conspiracy. The President's honesty is too well established to be impeached by a set of miserable rogues who would destroy the country to morrow if thereby they could enrich themselves. Fortunately, nobody believes what they say, and honest men all over the land will be only too glad to hear of the complete smash up of this detestable "ring."

"THE SITUATION—AGAIN."—Somebody is feeling uneasy. We recollect that some years ago a friend of ours down street went to jail "for the fun of the thing." He remained there but a few hours, but he had been there, and for years he heard of it, and the "situation" had to be explained, over and over again—and so it will be with the guerrillas. Cremer has already given us "The Situation—Again."—with a lot of stuff no right minded man believes. But the "situation" is a very unpleasant one, and we can't blame Cremer much for making it as comfortable as possible.

☞ The fanatical fools of the Harrisburg Patriot are prating about contesting the election of Gov. Geary. If you can't find anything better than that to growl about, why don't you pitch into the XVth Amendment, the national debt, protection to American industry, &c., &c. By the way, since we come to think of it, you have worn those subjects thread-bare, so you had better go to writing eulogies on Jeff. Davis, Robert E. Lee, Col. Moseby, or "Brick" Pomeroy. Anything, so that you give us something new. Another chapter on buck-shot wars would be interesting reading matter for a day or two.

☞ Party organization, and success—disorganization, and defeat. As long as the world stands there will be two parties. Men will belong to one or the other. Evils will exist in both. The man who will aid in defeating his own party because he cannot rule it to his own selfish interests is worse than an open enemy and should be treated as such. A guerrilla is worse than a thief—he would make you believe he is a friend—an earnest advocate of the principles of your party, but if he is not permitted to rule, he will to the extent of his ability, try to ruin. Orlady, the great Chief of the disorganizers, is at the head of the Guerrilla band that has for its organ Cremer's Republican. If the Republican party is to be successful in the county hereafter, the guerrilla band and its organ must be repudiated by the party.

WHAT HAVE THEY GAINED?—What has the guerrilla band gained by the election of Democrats to the Legislature from this district and Democrats to three important county offices?—They defeated McVitty for the Senate two years ago, and they tried to defeat Capt. Neely for Sheriff last fall.—Next fall they will try again to defeat the one armed soldier, Judge Beaver, for re-election, and all other Republican nominees who will not bow to their dictation. Thanks for their boldness this fall—they are known to the whole party, and spotted, and cannot deceive good Republican voters a second time. They may caucus and vote with the Democrats, but they will not be able to control enough votes hereafter to elect any more Democrats to office over the heads of better Republicans than they ever were.

"Go the Candidates from Top to the Bottom of the List."

We publish below another interesting letter from the Guerrilla Chief, to show who have been guilty of packing and trying to pack County Conventions, and nominating "ring" candidates. Orlady's "programme" was worked throughout the county previous to the last Convention, but he and his faction were not successful in everything, therefore they smashed some of the nominations. Cremer's Republican is a very proper organ for such a clan, and no doubt its editor feels himself "at home."

Read the letter, and wait patiently for another. Good things should not be had all at one time. Some of the gentlemen named in the letters will excuse us for making free with their names—our object being to expose the manner Conventions have been packed by the leader of the Guerrilla band who so successfully marshalled his forces to victory over the Republican party this fall.

STRICTLY PRIVATE—BURN.

PETERSBURG, June 23d, 1866.

FRIEND. SHEARER: DEAR SIR:—I again drop you a confidential letter which you will note contents and then consign to the flames. I have heard from a number of our friends, and seen several leading men since I last wrote you. I will now give you some hints which I know you will promote your interest by attending to without delay. Write to J. C. Walker, Petersburg, and Andrew Myton, Manor Hill. Say to them that the relationship existing between you induces you to drop them a confidential letter; and ask their aid which if conferred will be gratefully remembered. Say you are a candidate for Register and Recorder and will receive a strong support from the lower end of the county, and should be pleased to have some delegates to aid you from the upper end. Request them to speak favorably to those likely to be elected delegates in your behalf, and by so doing they will confer a lasting favor upon you. Myton's first wife was a Hyle. He is an active, good man. I can work better with them if you approach them in this way.

Write Henry Davis, Cottage P. O., Adam Warfel, Mill Creek, D. Clarkson, Esq., Cassville, Hon. B. F. Patton, Warriorsmark, John Cummins, Esq., McAlavy's Fort, Maj. William Moore, Shavers Creek P. O. The foregoing list are in office or have been in lately. Say to them: Excuse me for troubling you at this time. The interest you felt in their success in getting their nomination, and the active support you gave at the polls, must plead your excuse for asking their aid at this time. You are a candidate for Register and Recorder, and will receive a large support from the lower end. You should like, therefore, to have them speak to the men in your behalf likely to be elected delegates, so that you may also have support from different parts of the county. Assure them that any aid they may render you will be kindly remembered and compensated with pleasure, if ever their names should come before the public in future.

Write to Samuel Peightel, Capt. Jno. Brewster, McConnellstown, Perry Moore, N. Lytle, Esq., Dr. S. Thompson, Spruce Creek, James Thompson, Birmingham, Elias Mosser, Samuel Steffey, McAlavy's Fort, Henry Holtzapple, Wm. McClure, Shavers Creek P. O., Jacob Stabley, Jr., Capt. Joseph Johnston, Shavers Creek P. O., Henry Neff, Neffs Mills, Col. John Huyett, H. S. Wharton, Geo. W. Johnston, Esq., Horatio Fisher, Huntingdon. Say to them that you are a candidate for Reg. and Rec. and will receive a large support from the lower end of the county; should be pleased to have them aid you at this time by speaking favorably in your behalf to those likely to be elected delegates to the coming Union convention. Many of those persons are supporters and all right. A neat brief letter will stir them up and be useful. Major James Steel first came out for Prothonotary; report says he has now declared himself a candidate for Reg. and Rec. Everything seems to be moving favorably. Wharton and Swoope will both be anxious to have you supported strongly, as that will lessen Baker's chances. I would be pleased to hear from you. Say who you will likely send for delegates in Tell and Dublin. Is Captain Blair exerting himself? What are Bakers doing? Have your delegates from Tell and Dublin, if possible, to go the candidates from top to the bottom of the list. Don't use my name with any one.

Yours truly, H. ORLADY.

☞ "And we intend to do the same thing over again."—Guerrilla Organ.

That's just what the Democrats expect of you, to the extent of your influence. If you and your clan could succeed in disorganizing the Republican party next fall to the extent you did in the late campaign, the other half of the Republican majority in the county will also go overboard, and then you and the Democracy can have another big time rejoicing over your victory. Admitting that you are through in the Republican party, you cannot lose anything by working for the Democracy, but you must not expect to deceive anybody next fall.—You "intend doing the same thing over again!" That's honest—the Republican voters of the county will know just where to find you, and how far to trust you. If they want the Republican party defeated in the county they will support your guerrilla sheet and work up to Orlady's "programme," which is to nominate no man who will not work with his "ring" and if any others should be nominated, to defeat them at the election.

$113,981 81 conscience money had been received at the Treasury Department up to the 28th ult. The Treasurer will recommend that it be placed to the credit of the general sinking fund.

Many distinguished men have died this year. One politically.

What Does it Show?

The guerrilla organ, Cremer's Republican, of last week, gives a three column article to show who did and who did not vote for Williamson, and who did and who did not vote for Cloyd, for County Treasurer. Now we cannot see any other point to be arrived at than that some Democrats and Guerrillas and their influence voted for Cloyd and that some Democrats who would not vote for a guerrilla, and the Republicans who were true to their party nominee, voted for Williamson. The total vote in the county gave Cloyd 2527—Williamson 2152. We do not deny that many Democrats voted for Williamson—they had no candidate of their own and would not be bound by the bargain and sale entered into by the leading guerrillas and some of the leading Democrats of this place. But because Democrats voted for Williamson does not make the Guerrilla faction less guerrilla—their treason to party nominations stinks just as strong as it would have done had no Democrats voted for Williamson. The voting masses of the Democratic party were free to vote just for whom they pleased for county offices without violating any pledges as party men—they having no nominated party ticket in the field. The Petrikin wing of the Democratic party agreed for a price to vote for Cloyd, other Democrats who have no love for guerrillas either in their own party or any other, either did not vote at all on the Treasury question or voted for Williamson who acted an honorable part as a party nominee. The political character and standing of the guerrilla organ and its clan would be no better nor no worse if every Democrat in the county had voted solid for Williamson or solid for Cloyd. They, as Republican party men, must stand upon the Guerrilla record they have made for themselves. They cannot throw the responsibility of their conduct upon the shoulders of other men.

☞ They are at their old game of political trickery already. The guerrilla leaders never tire at their efforts to win at a County Convention. Before the late Convention Jackson Enyeart was promised a nomination by leading guerrillas for County Commissioner, and we suppose the promise, one of many, is extended to next fall. Lately, Rash Fisher offered the same office to Henry Cook if he would work with his faction. Mr Cook replied that he would have no objections to receiving the office, but he could not accept the nomination from a set of d——d guerrillas. No doubt the guerrilla "programme" of promising an office to at least one man in every township for the purpose of securing a controlling influence over delegates will be worked up wherever a man green enough can be found to bite at their bait, only to find himself deceived after his delegates are used to advance the political interests of the leaders of the Orlady "ring." We don't think the guerrillas will be troubled in the next Republican Convention selecting candidates for any of the offices. In their Convention they can nominate men of their kind without consulting Republicans. They can't pull the wool over the eyes of good Republicans a second time. Their jig is up.

☞ The response of the people of London to the declaration of the Premier, Mr. Gladstone, that the Fenian prisoners should not be pardoned, has been speedy, emphatic and unmistakable. The demonstration was not made by the Irish residents in London, but by the working people generally. Sunday was selected because it is the day the class participating can best devote to such a purpose. Vast processions marched from various portions of the metropolis, to Hyde Park, where a monster meeting was held, numbering 50,000 persons. The speeches, the cable states, were of a highly "inflammatory character," and "the American flag was hoisted and loudly cheered." Resolutions were passed, by acclamation, demanding amnesty for the Fenians." Precisely what has been done in every county in Ireland, and yet Mr. Gladstone has declared the amnesty will not be granted. Who is to yield—the people or the government, is a question that must be answered soon.

☞ Those interested in ecclesiastical movements will remember the great interest felt throughout the country last year in the proceedings of the Old and New School General Assemblies of the Presbyterian Church, looking toward a union of the two bodies. The terms of union, doctrinal and practical, agreed on by the committees in conference, it will be recollected, passed both bodies. It was then to be sent down to the presbyteries of each denomination to be voted on directly. Returns from more than two-thirds of the presbyteries have been now received, and the union is known to have been ratified by more than the required majority. According to the terms of their respective adjournments the two General Assemblies will meet in Pittsburg, November 10, to count the ballots and declare officially the result.

THERE is a county in Iowa that did not poll a single, solitary Democratic vote at the October election. That county should be awarded a gold medal, by all means. No guerrillas there.

There is a difference of opinion among them, but the most of them hold to the view that the abolition of capital punishment has led to no injurious results.

☞ A stranger might suppose, after reading the Guerrilla Organ, that the guerrillas are very honest in their political purposes. They propose to elect Democrats whenever they fail to have nominated by a Republican Convention, men of their "ring"—men who it nominated and elected will aid in the support of guerrilla and Democratic organs. They say they are purifiers. They purify the Republican party by electing Democrats they have denounced as worse than rebels. When they succeed in purifying the Republican party by giving all the offices in the county to the Democratic party it is very natural to suppose they will be ready to go to that party for their reward. They cannot deceive any further—they may as well go while the Democracy are willing to receive them. Andy Johnsonism is played out.

☞ A "strictly private" circular of the Liquor League, or the "whiskey ring" is said to have been extensively circulated throughout this State a few weeks prior to the election. It sets forth that Gov. Geary was pledged to sign a prohibitory liquor law; that the "temperance fanatics" were working to secure enough prohibitory men in the Legislature to pass such a bill; and that Governor Geary must be defeated at every hazard, and the prohibitory candidates must share the same fate, no matter to what political organization they may belong. But notwithstanding this circular of the whiskey ring, their quiet working, and their money and their liquor poured out like water, General Geary is still Governor, and will be expected to administer the laws without favor of any ring or society.

He has lately incurred the sentence of ex-communication, because he refused to obey an order requiring him to go back to his Convent, and coming to this country instead. Another Steamboat Disaster.

Burning of the Steamer Stonewall.

CHICAGO, October 28, 1869.

A special from Carbondale, Illinois, says that the steamer Stonewall, which left St. Louis on Tuesday evening for New Orleans, heavily laden with passengers, horses, mules, hay, and other freight, generally, last night about 8 o'clock, when near Neely's landing, 10 miles from Grand Tower, took fire, and despite all efforts to save her, was burned to the water's edge. When the fire broke out every effort was made to land, but the steamer was so heavily laden that she could not be brought nearer than one hundred yds. of the shore. Great confusion and terror prevailed. There were about two hundred cabin and deck passengers aboard, quite a number of whom were women and children. The flames spread with great rapidity. Scores of men sprung into the water and attempted to reach the shore by swimming Nearly all these were lost. Every conceivable object that could be obtained was thrown into the water, and to these passengers clung with all the tenacity of life.

The steamer Belle Memphis, Capt. Crane, on her way to St. Louis, reached the scene during the fire, and picked up from the water all that are known to be saved. The pilot, engineer, stroker, carpenter, and forty-four passengers are known to be saved.—The captain, the clerks and other officers, deck hands and many of the passengers were lost. All the books and papers of the boat were lost, as also were the cattle and other freight on board. A number of persons died after reaching the shore from the exposure in the water.

There was no explosion. All of the women and children were lost, nearly if not all being burned to death. The conduct of the passengers and officers is said to have been heroic. Such an appalling scene has not been witnessed on the Mississippi for many years. The saved were kindly cared for by the officers of the Belle Memphis, and were carried on to St. Louis. The number lost or their names had not been ascertained when this dispatch closed, but it is feared that one hundred and twenty five to one hundred and fifty are lost.

LATER—An interview with the assistant engineer of the ill fated steamer, by a telegraph correspondent at Carbondale, gets from him the following statement: The alarm was given at half past six, and in ten minutes the boat was in a sheet of flames, and every person had deserted her. Of the women on board, but three were saved. But one yawl was seen and that was taken possession of by some deck passengers. No other life boat or life preservers were seen. The boat was grounded two hundred yards from the shore, in about six feet of water.—There were forty cabin and one hundred and fifty deck passengers, and sixty of the crew, in all about two hundred and fifty souls. About fifty only were saved.

ST. LOUIS, October 28.—Mr. Phelps, a planter of Shreveport, La., has arrived from the wreck of the Stonewall and furnishes the following: The boat caught fire at half past six o'clock Wednesday evening, at a point a little below Neely's Landing, 125 below St. Louis, from a candle which the deck passengers had near some hay, while playing cards. The steamer was run on a gravel bar, the pilot supposing that the passengers could wade ashore on the bar. Unfortunately at the end of the bar there was a slough, and here it was that the larger number were drowned. The boat was run on the bar but two feet, and the shallowest point about her had five or six feet of water. The boat had so much hay aboard that she burned like tinder, and all efforts to put it out were unavailing.

The people at Neely's saw the light and hastened to assist. One man rescued sixteen persons with a skiff. Had it not been for their help, all would have been lost. A gentleman from Paducah, Ky., swam ashore with a lady, and at her entreaty returned to save her child. In swimming ashore he was grasped by a drowning man, and would have been himself drowned had he not shook him off. One man was taken from the wreck so badly burned that he died as soon as he reached the shore.

☞ A young man went from New York to Jersey the other evening to visit his intended, and as it was late and very dark when he left the house to return to the ferry, she insisted on his taking a lantern with him, and gave him a red paper one, a la Chinese. The youth had a long distance to walk to the depot, and took the railroad track as the shortest route. He walked along paying very little attention to anything, being somewhat abstracted with the thoughts of his lady-love; but the revery was suddenly brought to an end by some one from the rear, who gave the Chinese lantern a kick that sent it flying. "Confound you!" said the person from behind, "here I have been slowing my train for the las two miles on account of that red light."—And indeed it was true, for not far behind him the young gentleman was a freight train, and it was the engineer who had kicked the light. The young man now goes among his chums by the name of "Red Light Bill."

Thanksgiving Day.

Washington, Oct. 8.—By the President of the United States of America

A PROCLAMATION.

The year which is drawing to a close has been free from pestilence; health has prevailed throughout the land; abundant crops reward the labors of the husbandman; commerce and manufactures have successfully prosecuted their peaceful paths; the mines and forests have yielded liberally; the nation has increased in wealth and in strength; peace has prevailed and its blessings have advanced every interest of the people in every part of the Union; harmony and fraternal interest restored are obliterating the marks of past conflict and estrangement, burdens have been lightened, means have been increased, civil and religious liberty are secured to every inhabitant of this land, whose soil is trod by none but freemen. It becomes a people thus favored to make acknowledgment to the Supreme Author from whom such blessings flow, of their gratitude and their dependence, to render praise and thanksgiving for the same, and devoutly to implore a continuance of God's mercies.

Therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do recommend that Thursday, the 18th of November next, be observed as a day of thanksgiving and of praise and prayer to Almighty God, the Creator and Ruler of the universe. And I do further recommend to all the people of the United States to assemble on that day in their accustomed places of public worship, and to unite in the homage and praise due to the bountiful Father of all mercies, and in fervent prayer for the continuance of the manifold blessings He has vouchsafed to us as a people.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed, this 5th day of October, A. D. 1869, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-fourth.

By the President: U. S. GRANT.
HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

The President of the United States having issued the foregoing proclamation, I do most earnestly advise that the people of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, for the reasons therein given, strictly observe its recommendations.

Given under my hand and the seal of the Commonwealth, at Harrisburg, this 25th day of October, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, and of the independence of the United States the ninety-fourth.

JOHN W. GEARY.

F. JORDAN, Sec. of the Commonwealth.

A Serious Affair.

Much excitement has been created in our usually quiet borough, owing to the death of a young man named Miles Hampson, on Thursday evening last, who had been struck the previous Monday evening by another young man named A. H. Crewitt.—The circumstances of the affair are briefly as follow: On the Monday night in question, Hampson, in company with another man named Hatfield, entered Wharton & Maguire's store, and bought some shot from the clerk.—While in the store, some words passed between Crewitt and Hampson, and Hampson a short time afterwards called Hatfield to go out the back door with him, which he did. Crewitt followed them out, and returned in about a minute. Hampson came in with Hatfield, having received a wound in the head. He walked to the Doctor's and had the cut dressed, and moved around as usual until noon of the next day, when he fainted on the street, and was carried to the Jackson House, where he became worse, and finally expired on Thursday evening. Crewitt was arrested shortly after Hampson expired. Bail for $5,000 was received for his appearance at Court, when the case will undergo investigation.

THE SAFE DEPOSIT COMPANY OF PITTSBURGH.—The necessity for a place of absolute security and safety for valuables in these days when so large an amount of Government, as well as other loans, evidenced only by bonds, is held by all classes, has long been felt, and we are glad to be able to state, that provision has been made by the Company mentioned above, for supplying this want. An elegant fire-proof building combining beauty and great strength has been erected at No. 83, Fourth Avenue, Pittsburgh, and is now occupied by the Company. The "honest man" referred to above is our quondam friend and fellow-typo James A. Stewart, Esq., who now assists in "checking" the Day Express East and Mail train West, between Altoona and Harrisburg. We always knew James was honest, but then he couldn't well be anything else for he belongs to a craft that admits of no one who is not strictly honest.

Storing Vegetables.

As soon as the tops of potatoes are brown, it is time to dig them. All experienced farmers know that each frosty night deteriorates their keeping qualities. They should be dug on a sunny day, if possible—never on a wet; the soil that adheres tends to decay. Store every day the potatoes which are dug, or protect them with boards. It is said that one pint of water-slacked lime, scattered through a barrel of potatoes, will effectually destroy any tendency to rot. The remedy is within the reach of all. Immense crops of potatoes are raised in New-England. New Hampshire and Vermont raise millions of bushels for starch manufacture. Starch-mills are erected upon every little stream, and these States supply nearly all the starch used in cotton-cloths and prints.

Squashes should be gathered before the frosty nights, if they are desired to keep well. They can lie on the back piazza or in the barn until colder weather comes, and then a place must be selected neither too warm or too cold. The upper shelf in a kitchen-pantry, which does not freeze, we have found a good receptacle. Those who possess an old-fashioned brick oven can keep squashes the year round. If the oven is used, the squashes can be taken out when it is needed; but very few house wives in these days bake in them, and they are frost-proof and not too warm.

Onions must be stored before the frost. If in small quantities, they can be tied on straws, or plaited together with their stems, and deposited in the aforesaid brick oven, where the spring will find them as fresh as in autumn. In larger quantities, they can be kept in the barn until in danger of freezing, then stored in barrels in the cellar.—An old Shaker told us that they let theirs freeze stiff in the barn, and in the spring they would grow just as well. When needed for use, they thawed them in cold water.

Carrots, beets and parsnips should be gathered early, while their juices are in their prime. They are best kept in layers of dry sand, covering a thick layer over the top of the box. Stored in this way, all their freshness is retained.

Cabbages can be planted out all round the sides of the cellar, and will grow during the winter; or remove the outer leaves, and store in boxes or barrels. Kept in pits, dug below the action of the frost, they will come out in the spring white as celery, and much fresher than those stored in the cellar.—Exchange.

Housekeepers' Recipes.

We take the following from Mrs. Hunnicee's diary in the Hearth and Home:

Moths.—A housekeeper says the ravages of moths in carpets may be arrested by sprinkling them with fine salt and sweep clean. This will destroy fleas. She uses salt on her carpets once a month, and nothing keeps them so clean and bright as this.

White Cake.—Two cups of white sugar, two and two-thirds cups of flour, two-thirds of a cup of butter and lard, allowing about one even tablespoonful of lard, whites of eight eggs well beaten, a teaspoonful and a half of royal baking-powder sifted with the flour. Season with lemon, and bake from an hour to an hour and a quarter.

A nice Plain Cake.—Two cups of flour, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one half cup of butter, half a cup of sweet milk, half a teaspoonful of soda and one of cream-tartar sifted with the flour.—Bake slowly in an oven not too hot, and cover with a paper until nearly done. The paper if put on when the cake is first set into the oven, prevents it from rising in the middle and bursting open. This last is a good rule for all cake.

Thanksgiving Day.

Washington, Oct. 8.—By the President of the United States of America

A PROCLAMATION.

The year which is drawing to a close has been free from pestilence; health has prevailed throughout the land; abundant crops reward the labors of the husbandman; commerce and manufactures have successfully prosecuted their peaceful paths; the mines and forests have yielded liberally; the nation has increased in wealth and in strength; peace has prevailed and its blessings have advanced every interest of the people in every part of the Union; harmony and fraternal interest restored are obliterating the marks of past conflict and estrangement, burdens have been lightened, means have been increased, civil and religious liberty are secured to every inhabitant of this land, whose soil is trod by none but freemen. It becomes a people thus favored to make acknowledgment to the Supreme Author from whom such blessings flow, of their gratitude and their dependence, to render praise and thanksgiving for the same, and devoutly to implore a continuance of God's mercies.

Therefore, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, do recommend that Thursday, the 18th of November next, be observed as a day of thanksgiving and of praise and prayer to Almighty God, the Creator and Ruler of the universe. And I do further recommend to all the people of the United States to assemble on that day in their accustomed places of public worship, and to unite in the homage and praise due to the bountiful Father of all mercies, and in fervent prayer for the continuance of the manifold blessings He has vouchsafed to us as a people.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed, this 5th day of October, A. D. 1869, and of the independence of the United States of America the ninety-fourth.

By the President: U. S. GRANT.

McGUIRE'S

SPANISH HAIR DRESSER

FOR PROMOTING THE GROWTH, BEAUTIFYING THE HAIR,

And rendering it dark and glossy. No other compound possesses the peculiar properties which so exactly suit the various conditions of the human hair. The use of this oil as a hair dresser has been universal in every section of the country in the Spanish Main for centuries.—No preparation of art could give that elegant luxurience and abundance of hair which have so often been the admiration of travelers in Spain. This oil is highly and delicately perfumed, forming an article unrivaled in excellence and upon which the Spanish people for many years have set its seal of enduring approval.

McGUIRE'S

This article is entirely different from anything of the kind ever offered in this country and is warranted free from all poisonous substances This valuable lotion was used by the Emperor Maximilian, and Empress Carlotta of Mexico, and universally used by Mexicans for three hundred years. As a wash for the head—it is cooling, cleansing and refreshing.—When thus used it at once relieves headache.

BAUGH'S

RAW BONE

SUPER-PHOSPHATE OF LIME.

STANDARD WARRANTED.

We offer to Farmers, the present fall season, BAUGH'S RAW BONE SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME as being highly improved.

Baugh's Raw Bone Super Phosphate is, as its name indicates, prepared by dissolving Raw Bones in Oil of Vitriol—that is, bones that have not been deprived of their organic matter—the grease and glue—by burning or baking. It, therefore, presents to the use of the farmer all the valuable properties of Raw Bones in a highly concentrated form—rendering it at once quick in action and very permanent.

☞ Farmers are recommended to purchase of the dealer located in their neighborhood. In sections where no dealer is yet established, the PHOSPHATE may be procured directly from the undersigned.
